this book explores the persistence of the governance gap with respect to the human rights impacting conduct of transnational extractive corporations operating in zones of weak governance the authors launch their account with a fascinating case study of talisman energy s experience in sudan informed by their own experience as members of the 1999 canadian assessment mission to sudan harker mission drawing on new governance reflexive law and responsive law theories the authors assess legal and other non binding governance mechanisms that have emerged since that time including the un guiding principles on business and human rights they conclude that such mechanisms are incapable of systematically preventing human rights violating behaviour by transnational corporations or of assuring accountability of these actors or recompense for victims of such violations the authors contend that home state regulation while not a silver bullet has a crucial role to play in regulating such conduct they pick up where un special representative john ruggie s guiding principles on business and human rights left off and propose an innovative robust and adaptable template for strengthening the regulatory framework of home states their model draws insights from the theoretical literature leverages existing public private transnational national soft and hard regulatory tools and harnesses the specific strengths of state based governance this book will be of interest to academics policy makers students civil society and business leaders a solution to the problem of climate change requires close international cooperation and difficult reforms involving all states law has a clear role to play in that solution what is not so clear is the role that law has played to date as a constraining factor on state conduct international climate change law and state compliance is an unprecedented treatment of the nature of climate change law and the compliance of states with that law the book argues that the international climate change regime in the twenty or so years it has been in existence has developed certain normative rules of law binding on states state conduct under these rules is characterized by generally high compliance in areas where equity is not a major concern there is by contrast low compliance in matters requiring a burden sharing agreement among states to reduce global greenhouse gas emissions to a safe level the book argues that the substantive climate law presently in place must be further developed through normative rules that bind states individually to top down mitigation commitments while a solution to the problem of climate change must take this form the law s development in this direction is likely to be hesitant and slow the book is aimed at scholars and graduate students in environmental law international law and international relations
